RAIQ / MEMBERSHIP CATEGORIES

INDIVIDUAL MEMBER: This category includes artist who has interdisciplinary works presented to the public in a professional context, and the cultural worker who contributes to the processes of creation / dissemination of interdisciplinary art. He may become an individual member by sending an application to the corporation and as long as his application for membership is accepted by the directors, and he assumes the annual membership fees required. The individual member has the right to vote during general assemblies and may be elected to an administrative position within the corporation.

CORPORATE MEMBER: Any organization or collective of creation, production and dissemination in interdisciplinary art may become a member by sending an application to the corporation and as long as its application for membership is accepted by the directors. Corporate members are responsible for the annual membership fee charged. The corporate member may appoint a delegate to represent him at the meetings; Such delegate shall have the right to vote and may be elected to an administrative position within the corporation.

AFFILIATED MEMBER: Any individual, company or institution whose work falls outside the parameters of interdisciplinary practice or such fields represented by the corporation can become an affiliated member by submitting an application to the corporation, which – pending acceptance by the administration and the ability of the member to pay the obligatory annual fee – does not allow the affiliated member the right to vote nor to be elected to an administrative position within the corporation.
